Chapter 1 by Parkour_Ninja

He cracked open the door and saw a mist escape, he began inhaling and it smelled liked the sweet aroma of chocolate. He entered and ran his hand against the wall searching for a light switch, to his surprise he did not find one. He grabbed his phone and turned on the flashlight, he scanned near the door for a light switch and still could not find it. He decided to proceed and walked toward the staircase, he heard a slam of a door and looked back reflexively. He began to slowly turn and look down the staircase when his phone died. He knew there would be no point in attempting to open the door so he proceeded down the stairs. A little later he ran into a beaded string and almost fell back in fright, but soon realized that was used to turn on the light. He pulled the rope and light immediately filled the room.. He finished walking down the stairs only to be greeted by a young woman who said hello Jed, you sure took your time coming. She pulled out a bottle sprayed herself with the chocolate aroma and pulled out a blood stained knife. She waved it in a way to tell him to come sit down, and he did...
